General information on Erasmus

Erasmus emphasizes student and staff mobility and European co-operation involving higher education institutions in the knowledge-based economy. It supports the creation of a European Higher Education Area (EHEA) through increased mobility. This allows for more innovation, growth and jobs in the EU. Together with an enriched study experience, Erasmus also provides exposure to different cultures.

In addition to students, Erasmus also targets teachers, trainers, and others involved in higher education. This includes relevant associations, research centers, counseling organizations, etc. It is also open to enterprises, social partners and stakeholders, as well as public and private bodies providing education and training at local, regional and national levels.

Erasmus supports actions in the fields of mobility (period of study or placement abroad), European projects and networks.

ERASMUS
Erasmus of Rotterdam (1466-1536), the famous Dutch humanist and theologian, taught in Paris (FR), Louvain (BE) and Cambridge (UK), traditional European centers of learning.
