BRATISLAVA

Although Bratislava ranks among the youngest capitals in Europe, its history is very rich. The city was situated at the crossroads of important trade and military routes.

The first vestiges of the territory's settlement are connected with the Younger Stone age. The Slavic tribes of today's Slovak population came to the territory of today's city sometime in the 5th-6th centuries.

During the 7th century, Bratislava was a part of a Samo's empire, in the 9th century Bratislava has become a significant city of the Great Moravian Principedome.

The city has received all the privileges of a free town in 1291. From 10th century to 1918 Bratislava was a part of a Hungary. After the Turkish occupation Bratislava has become the coronation town, 11 Hungarian kings and 8 queens were coronated in the St. Martin's Cathedral. The first coronation was in 1563 (king Maximilián II.), the last in 1830 (king Ferdinand V.).

Probably the most famous queen coronated in the St. Martin's Cathedral was Maria Theresa in 1741.

BRATISLAVA

From 1918 Bratislava was a part of a Czechoslovakia and from 1st January 1993 Bratislava is the capital city of the Slovak Republic.

The most famous historical monuments in Bratislava are for sure the Bratislava Castle, St. Martin's Cathedral, Michael's Tower with Michael's Gate, the Old Town Hall, The Primatial Palace with a beautiful Mirror Hall (the seat of the Mayor of Bratislava), The Grassalkovich Palace (the seat of the President of Slovakia), The Slovak National Theatre (old building), The National Gallery, Reduta etc.
